

3. The Examiner contends that Clark teaches primary ribs each having a compound profile. The ribs do not have a compound profile.
4. The Examiner contends that Clark teaches an actuating arm with a hinge at one end. The Examiner has stretched the English language beyond recognition to reach this conclusion. Abiding by even a broad interpretation of the words, Clark does not show an actuating arm with a hinge at one end.
5. The Examiner contends that Clark teaches a fruit dome. There is no dome.

The Applicant agrees that the Examiner is entitled to interpret the wording of the claims broadly but there is no justification for stretching the language beyond the point where the limitations of language become a nonsense.

Favourable reconsideration is requested.

Please charge any deficiency in the fees due to our Deposit Account No. 503458 in the name of Molins & Co.

Regards,

Michael Molins
Reg. No. 31785
Customer No. 33372

Encl. Extension Fee (One Month)

MM/rm